free.aero HOISTS THE ITALIAN FLAG!

Your paragliding and paramotoring magazine is flying further than ever before!

Only seven months ago, in May this year, we launched the first international version of the French magazine, voler.info, in English: free.aero. The successful launch of free.aero right across all the English speaking nations has encouraged us to launch another new magazine.

From now on, all the Italian paraglider and paramotor pilots will be able to read our magazine in their own 'bellissimo' language! According to the world-wide association of paraglider manufacturers, the PMA, there are 7500 paraglider pilots in Italy and 2500 paramotor pilots.

We are delighted to have Luca Basso, former president of the Italian Federation of free flight (FIVL), heading our Italian team of translators.

The digital magazine it.free.aero will be published at the same cadence as the English and French versions and, like free.aero, it will be free to access without any obligation to subscribe and be totally free to its readers.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all the readers of free.aero and voler.info magazine and our advertisers for making this latest new edition to our family of international magazines possible.

Best wishes from all the team at free.aero
